

AMGEN Project Series

AMGEN was looking for a way to homogenize project practices and implement a standardized process and language among their project teams. Homegrown project practices had resulted in a variety of processes that varied greatly in efficiency and effectiveness.

AMGEN asked Humentum to leverage our Project Series (Project Leadership Essentials, Technical Project Management programs) to assist in the definition of best practices and to establish a consistent framework throughout the records maintenance portion of the organization.

This blended learning approach facilitated immersion of participants in a realistic project environment and allowed them to identify best practices and improve intra-team communications. It also facilitated the project definition phase of work at AMGEN and resulted in more consistency in project resourcing.