

humentum Company Overview

First organized in 2004, Humentum has now served the training community for almost 10 years. Our goal is to leverage cutting-edge technology to produce measurable change in individuals, teams and organizations.

Humentum founders began working with simulation in the business environment in the early 1990's. At that time, the technology was new and expensive, making it available to only a select few. Having worked with the technology for many years, we recognized the benefits and wanted to find ways to make it available to a wider audience.

Our goal in organizing was to reduce costs, leverage distance learning / internet to make simulation and blended learning available to virtually every organization. As leaders in the growth of this technology, Humentum has pioneered Rapid Prototyping, a process by which simulations can be quickly designed to blend with existing content and fit with your specific environment.

Humentum is small company focused on delivering low cost, high quality, cutting edge training and development products and services. Our products are designed to be used by individuals, cross-functional teams and large organizations.

Let us show you the benefits of blended learning and the power of simulation in your organization.
